 - having regard to the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (ECHR), the case law of the European Court of Human Rights, the conventions, recommendations, resolutions and reports of the Parliamentary Assembly, the Committee of Ministers, the Human Rights Commissioner and the Venice Commission of the Council of Europe,
 - having regard to the Commission report of 24 January 2017 on ‘Strengthening Citizens’ Rights in a Union of Democratic Change – EU Citizenship Report 2017’ (COM(2017)0030),
 - having regard to the report of the European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights on ‘Challenges facing civil society organisations working on human rights in the EU’ published in January 2018,

- A. whereas the shared European fundamental values enshrined in Art. 2 TEU, namely the respect for human dignity, freedom, democracy, equality, the rule of law and respect for human rights, including the rights of persons belonging to minorities and the principles of pluralism, non-discrimination, tolerance, justice, solidarity and equality between women and men cannot be taken for granted and need to be continuously cultivated and protected as their deterioration in any Member State can have detrimental effects for the EU as a whole;

- B. whereas an active and well developed civil society in all EU Member States constitutes the best protection against an erosion of these values;
 - C. whereas many civil society organisations (CSOs) continue to promote these values albeit being faced with growing difficulties to secure the necessary funding to develop and perform their activities independently and effectively;
 - D. whereas the EU provides direct funding to CSOs operating in third countries to foster these values but the funding possibilities for CSOs pursuing this goal within the EU are very limited, in particular as regards CSOs operating at local and national level;
1. Reiterates that civil society organisations (CSOs) are vital for upholding and promoting the values enshrined in Art. 2 TEU, i.e. the respect for human dignity, freedom, democracy, equality, the rule of law and respect for human rights, including the rights of persons belonging to minorities, and play crucial role in promoting active citizenship in the EU as well as in facilitating informed public debate as part of a pluralist democracy;
 2. Stresses the need for the EU to develop new and effective ways to protect and promote these values within the European Union;
 3. Believes, in this regard, that the EU should provide targeted financial support to CSOs which are active at local and national level in promoting and protecting these values;
 4. Calls on the EU to set up a dedicated funding instrument - which could be called European Values Instrument - for the promotion and protection of the values enshrined in Art 2 TEU, especially democracy, rule of law and fundamental rights, within the EU budget of the next Multiannual Financial Framework (MFF) post-2020, with a funding level corresponding at least to the level of the European Instrument for Democracy and Human Rights, which serves similar purposes beyond EU borders; recommends that the instrument's structural priority should be to create a healthy and sustainable CSO sector at national and local level with the capacity to fulfil its role in safeguarding these values;
 5. Considers that the instrument should provide CSOs which are engaged in the promotion and protection of these values within the EU with operating grants, core funding as well as grants for projects and initiatives;
 6. Stresses that the instrument should be managed by the Commission and that it should ensure fast and flexible grant-making procedures; recommends, in particular that the application procedure is user-friendly and easily accessible to local and national CSOs;
 7. Considers that the instrument should specifically target projects and initiatives promoting European values at local and national level, such as civic participation projects and advocacy and other watchdog activities, and that transnational projects and initiatives should play only a subsidiary role; believes that particular emphasis should be placed on building the capacity of CSOs to engage with the general public so as to increase its understanding of pluralistic and participatory democracy, the rule of law and fundamental rights;

8. Stresses that the instrument should be complementary to already existing European and national instruments and activities promoting and protecting these values and should therefore not come at the expense of other European or national funds and activities in this area;
9. Underlines that financial accountability as laid down in the Financial Regulation must be ensured in the management of the new instrument, notably compliance with legal obligations, full transparency about the use of resources, sound financial management, and prudent use of resources;
10. Recommends to the Commission to draw up an annual report on the performance of the instrument and to publish a list of the organisations and activities it has funded;
11. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission, the governments and parliaments of the Member States and the Council of Europe.
