Subject:	Proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council on the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data by the Union institutions, bodies, offices and agencies and on the free movement of such data, and repealing Regulation (EC) No 45/2001 and Decision No 1247/2002/EC [First reading] - Progress report

I. INTRODUCTION

On 10 January 2017, the Commission adopted the above-mentioned proposal for a Regulation which lays down rules on the processing of personal data by Union institutions, bodies, offices and agencies (hereinafter Union institutions and bodies) as well as on the free movement of personal data in the Union. The proposal also sets out the rules on the European Data Protection Supervisor (EDPS). The EDPS monitors the application of this Regulation to all processing of personal data carried out by Union institutions and bodies.

This Regulation completes the modernized data protection regime of the EU. In April 2016, the Council and the European Parliament adopted the so-called 'data protection package' which comprises the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and the Police Directive on data protection for law enforcement purposes. The rules of this Regulation on data protection rules for Union institutions and bodies and the rules of the General Data Protection Regulation should be coherent, aligned as far as possible and applicable as of the same date: 25 May 2018.

In June 2017, the (Justice and Home Affairs) Council adopted the General Approach on this Regulation (9091/17) thereby giving the Presidency a negotiating mandate to enter into trilogues with the European Parliament. On 6 December, the Committee of Permanent Representatives endorsed an adapted mandate for the Presidency.

The European Parliament adopted its position at the end of October 2017. The first trilogue was held on November 8, followed by 3 other political trilogues. The last political trilogue under the Estonian Presidency was held on December 6, 2017. The Presidency also engaged in several technical meetings with the European Parliament and the Commission.

In these meetings, many issues were agreed upon, subject to the condition that nothing is agreed until everything is agreed. However, it proved not possible to reach an overall agreement on the Regulation by the end of this year, mainly due to the differing positions of the co-legislators regarding the scope of the draft instrument.

With this note, the Presidency informs delegations about the state of play in the negotiations between the Council and the European Parliament on the Regulation on data protection by Union institutions and bodies.

II. RESULTS OF THE NEGOTIATIONS

Main political issues

During the negotiations there were four main political issues on the table: scope of the Regulation; internal rules for restricting rights of data subjects; involving Council and Parliament in drawing up the short list of candidates for the post of European Data Protection Supervisor (EDPS) and harmonising the model for cooperation between the EDPS and the national data protection supervisory authorities. The main issue, where the co-legislators were not yet able to find a compromise, is the scope of the Regulation. Since the agreement on main political issues is part of the overall compromise package, the Council and the European Parliament did not succeed in reaching tentative agreements on any of the other three abovementioned main political issues. Nonetheless, the negotiations in the trilogues did result in clarifying and converging the positions of the co-legislators on several elements of the draft Regulation.

Scope

The main differences between the positions of the Parliament and the Council are related to two areas:

- EU institutions and bodies in the area of police cooperation and judicial cooperation in criminal matters (further referred to as law enforcement area); and
- missions and operations of the Common Security and Defence Policy (CSDP).

The General approach of the Council explicitly excludes application of the provisions of the Regulation to the EU institutions and bodies carrying out activities which fall within the scope of Chapter 4 or Chapter 5 of Title V of Part Three of the TFEU where the acts establishing those bodies, offices or agencies provide for comprehensive rules relating to the protection of natural persons with regard to the processing of their data (Article 2(1a)). This exclusion mainly concerns the three existing agencies in the area of police cooperation and judicial cooperation in criminal matters – Eurojust, Europol and European Public Prosecutor’s Office (EPPO). The European Parliament, however, insists on the inclusion of the agencies in the law enforcement area.

As regards the CSDP missions and operation, the Council has explicitly excluded these bodies from the scope of the draft Regulation. The position of the Council is based, first and foremost, on the legal reasoning that rules on data protection for missions and operations in the CSDP area should be based on Article 39 TEU, and Article 16 TFEU is not a correct legal basis due to the specific nature of the missions and operation in the CSDP area. On the other hand, the Parliament in its report has included the operations and missions in the CSDP area into the scope of the draft Regulation.

In addition to the above, the Parliament has foreseen inclusion of Eurodac in the scope the draft Regulation.

The Parliament insists on introducing a separate chapter (Chapter VIIIa in the EP report) in the draft Regulation, which would apply to EU institutions and bodies in the area of law enforcement and also to operations and missions in CSDP area. The main argument of the Parliament in the need for a “future-proof regime” for processing of operational personal data.

Presidency compromise package

Following several discussions with the Parliament, the Presidency decided to ask the Committee of Permanent Representatives (Coreper) for an updated mandate to continue negotiations. On 6 December, Coreper endorsed an adapted mandate for the Presidency, which included following compromise elements:

a) to exclude Europol, Eurojust and EPPO from the scope of the draft Regulation and maintain their special regimes. In order to address the concern of the Parliament and ensure coherence and consistency of the data protection rules, insert a strong review clause requesting the Commission to evaluate and assess the data protection regimes applicable to the three agencies and bodies and present, if necessary, relevant amendments;

b) to exclude CSDP missions and operations referred to in Articles 42(1), 43 and 44 TEU. The Presidency suggests to insert a joint Statement of the European Parliament and the Council along the lines of recital (10a) of the General Approach, calling for relevant proposals to ensure high level of data protection in the context of CSDP missions and operations;

c) to exclude Eurodac from the scope of the Regulation.

Coreper, however, did not endorse inclusion of a new Chapter laying down general provisions on data protection by Union institutions and bodies in the field of judicial cooperation in criminal matters and police cooperation.

State of play following the last trilogue

The Parliament did not consider the compromise package by the Presidency to be sufficient. While the Parliament showed a certain readiness to move towards the Council position on certain elements, the question of the application of the draft Regulation to the area of law enforcement remains open.

First of all, Council and Parliament have a common understanding that the draft Regulation should not, in principle, apply to processing of personal data by missions in CSDP area (Articles 42(1), 43 and 44 of the Treaty on European Union (TEU)). Moreover, both co-legislators agree that rules should be laid down on such processing. Therefore, they could consider a joint Statement calling for appropriate proposals to be submitted.

Secondly, the Parliament has indicated readiness to consider agreeing to exclusion of Eurodac from the scope of the draft Regulation.

However, the Parliament did not consider the insertion of a review clause concerning processing of operational personal data by the three existing agencies (Eurojust, Europol and EPPO) to be sufficient. While the Parliament could, in principle, consider separating discussions on the data protection rules for Europol and EPPO from the discussions on the draft Regulation, the Parliament insists on the need to include these agencies in its scope. The Parliament could, however, consider introducing a transitional period after which the Regulation would apply to Europol and EPPO. The Parliament also expressed its position that Eurojust should be subject to the new rules under the draft Regulation from the beginning as the draft Eurojust Regulation is currently in the trilogue negotiations. The Council has argued that the three existing agencies should be discussed at the same time in order to avoid possible gaps between different regimes that might cause difficulties for practical cooperation among those agencies. This issue remains open and will be subject to further discussions with the Parliament.

Council and Parliament maintain different positions about inserting general rules on processing of operational personal data by agencies and bodies in the field of judicial cooperation in criminal matters and police cooperation in the draft Regulation. On the one hand, the Parliament argues that, for reasons of common standards and interoperability, uniform rules must be laid down in a single legislative framework for all EU institutions and bodies.

On the other hand, Council considers it premature to include such a chapter, given that specific tailor-made data protection regimes have just been agreed for the main actors concerned, i.e., Europol and EPPO, and are under preparation for Eurojust. Furthermore, as the new rules are supposed to enter into force already in May 2018 as part of the data protection reform package, Council argues that the complex legal drafting required to create such a chapter and align it with the specific regimes would threaten this timetable. Council further takes the position that such a chapter must be drawn up carefully in order to avoid putting at risk the operational capacity of Europol, Eurojust and (in the near future) EPPO. While the Parliament considers application of a single instrument for all EU institutions and bodies to be an important step towards minimising fragmentation among different regimes for processing of personal data and, therefore, providing better data protection for individuals, the Council argues that the approach of the Parliament would lead to further fragmentation. The Council is especially concerned due to the nature of the existing three agencies, which are very closely connected with competent law enforcement authorities of the Member States and, therefore, require specific rules that would take due account also of the rules applied by the Member States in accordance with the Directive 2016/680.

While maintaining different views regarding the necessity of a chapter for processing of operational personal data in the draft Regulation, the Parliament and the Council are, provisionally, sharing the view that, if the general rules are to be considered, such rules should be based on Directive 2016/680 and not on the GDPR. Therefore, such a possible chapter should not, in any case, be considered a derogatory framework from other provisions of the draft Regulation, but a special regime applicable to processing of operational data in law enforcement area.

Following four trilogues, the Council and the Parliament were not ready to move towards a compromise on the question of the application of the draft Regulation to the EU institutions and bodies in the area of law enforcement and, therefore, discussions will have to continue under the Bulgarian Presidency.

Other main political issues

On the other three main political issues - internal rules, EDPS-shortlist and cooperation model - both Council and Parliament have expressed flexibility in the negotiations. Final positions of the co-legislators will depend on the outcome of the negotiations on the scope of the draft Regulation.

Minor political and technical issues.

The Council and the European Parliament have reached tentative agreement on almost all minor political and technical issues. The concrete provisions where Council and Parliament tentatively agree are set out in the fourth column of the annexed table.

The minor political issues listed below still require further reflections from both co-legislators on the exact wording and content of the provisions:

- the conditions where Union institutions and bodies must establish a central register on their activities of processing of personal data (AM 16 - recital(42), AM 17 - recital (47), AM 59 - Article 31(5))
- the obligations for the recipient of personal data that requests transmission of certain personal data and of the controller that processes the requested personal data, as well as the reconciliation between the principle of protection of personal data and the principle of public access to documents (AM 34 and GA- Article 9(1), AM 9 and GA - recital (22), GA - Article 70a).
- the conditions for transfers of personal data within and between Union institutions and bodies (AM 33 - Article 8a).
- consultation of EDPS in preparation of a Commission proposal (AM 18 - Recital (50) and AM 42 - Article 42(1))
- Data Protection Officer (AM 70 - Article 44(4))

All technical issues are solved.

III. CONCLUSION

The most important outstanding issue relates to the scope of the Regulation and in particular to the question if processing of operational personal data by Union institutions and bodies in the field of judicial cooperation in criminal matters and police cooperation should be part of a harmonised legislative framework. On almost all other issues, the co-legislators found compromise solutions or have indicated flexibility, subject to general condition that nothing is agreed until everything is agreed.

Delegations will find below the 4 column table on the review of Regulation 45/2001 which comprises the Commission proposal, the first reading Position of the European Parliament and the General Approach of the Council.

The markings in this table are to be read as follows:

- Second column with first reading Position of the European Parliament: new text is marked in bold italics; deleted parts of the text are marked in ~~strikethrough~~, text identical with the Commission proposal is marked - with a diagonal line in the box.
- Third column with General Approach of the Council: new text is marked in bold; deleted parts of the text are marked in bold/strikethrough.
- Fourth column: the diagonal line in the box indicates that the text is identical for all three institutions.
- Text tentatively agreed is indicated in green in the fourth column. "Nothing is agreed until everything is agreed" remains the basic principle.
- Open issues that have been discussed at inter institutional negotiations and still open are marked in orange in the fourth column.
- For those issues not having yet been discussed the fourth column is empty.
