Subject: Draft report from the Justice and Home Affairs Council to the European Council

- Action plan and priority work programme in the fields of justice and home Affairs

On 29 and 30 November 1993 the Justice and Home Affairs Council, meeting for the first time since its creation under the Treaty on European Union, set up the working structures provided for in by the Treaty. It duly mandated them to carry out the tasks defined by the new institutional framework entitled the Council to take fully into account, in this restructuring, the connections and links existing between the various areas coming within its competence: free movement of persons, immigration and asylum, better protection against threats from terrorism and organized crime and the fight of society against drugs. These will be tackled with greater consistency.

The Council adopted a work programme for 1994 for all the areas within its responsibility.
